Hello, I have a program similar to this running on a small web server. All the variables and states are static and will not change during the execution of the program. What I would like to do is to change the state variables when I click a button that will instantiate an XMLHttpRequest object. I have tried calling setState() on the XHR object, but nothing happens. I didn't think I needed a simulator for this, but I have to do more research. Maybe the project is just not yet implemented. I got it with a really simple program. You don't need much to make it work. "Hello, I have a program similar to this running on a small web server.
